NOT YOUR BOX TO TICK

Contemporary culture is a juxtaposition of freedom and control. This new body of work explores the dynamics of push and pull between acceptance and rejection, developed from conversations with friends over the past six months of where we 'belong', encroachment of our spaces and opportunities—the profound emotions in our relationships, interactions and frustrations.

There is a relinquishing of control throughout the whole collection of work. Every silkscreen print was planned, not one came to be as envisioned, they took on their own unexpected lives.

Each sculpture is active in its situation, the interactions are dependent on light sources. Colour floods with saturation or is muted, obscured, every piece a portrait.

KATE BANAZI

Focusing on the art of silk screen printing, UK-born Kate Banazi has worked from Sydney for the last decade on an art-based practice, working within fashion, music, illustration and advertising. Her work is experimental, intuitive and often playful, with science, space travel and colour interactions key references. She celebrates the variations of hand silkscreen printing, exploring the layering of colour and graphic elements alongside linear grid structures and hand drawn forms, whilst showing the makers hand.

By exploring silkscreen printing as a mark-making medium and embracing un-retouched screens, allowing the nuances, textures and unexpected results as outcomes to be welcomed and celebrated.

Her current work celebrates the interactions of colour and form through flat and 3D works in both silkscreen and coloured acrylic sculptures. Relationships, identity, movement, shadows and colour are mapped through interlocking shapes. Negative space and line work plot chaos, voids and beauty – a reaction of everyday life in all its unpredictable glory.
